Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The phrase, "screwdriver style" in the preamble of claims 1 and 8 is vague and indefinite. The body of the claim fails to recite sufficient structure to characterize a screwdriver. For example, a screwdriver commonly has a shank having a blade end. It is unclear if applicant intends to claim a shank having a blade end or not. Accordingly, the metes and bounds of claim are indeterminate of scope.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-11 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being anticipated by Tsai.

Tsai shows a screwdriver style pry bar having a handle member 1, an elongated shank 2, and an impact cap 3,4. Portions of the impact cap shown in Figure 4 are seen to be rounded. The handle is disclosed as being made from "insulated material" and made by "injection molding". The examiner takes Official Notice that handles that are made of insulated material and made by injection molding are commonly made from plastic. Accordingly, to make the handle member 1 of Tsai from plastic would have been obvious for one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made in view of the fact that materials with those properties are commonly made from plastic and this is an inexpensive way to provide a handle with this property. Column 2, lines 24-28 indicate that the the metal cap 4 and the shank 2 are made from an electrically conductive material. The examiner takes Official Notice that an electrically conductive material is metal and that screwdriver shanks are commonly made from metal. Accordingly to make the cap 4 and shank 2 from metal would have been obvious for one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made in view of the fact that metal is commonly used for screwdriver shanks and metal is commonly used on impact receiving materials. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this in order to provide the tool with the requisite strength and wear characteristics that are common when metal is used.

Claim 12-15 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected invention, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on 8/18/05.
